

SAFEGUARDING CHILDREN
INFORMATION UPDATE - 284
3rd May 2017

New research shows victims of CSA within families face differential access to support with many failing to receive the help they need (20/04/17)

The Children's Commissioner for England is today publishing 3 new reports which shine a light on the experiences of children who are victims of CSA.

On children's experiences of seeking help and support for CSA within the family environment:

- Every aspect of a child's life is affected if they experience CSA within the family but appropriate support to address the impact is often lacking with differential access across the country
- Professionals are often failing to pick up signs of CSA, unfairly placing responsibility on victims to make sure their abuse is identified
- Many children feel unable to disclose that they are victims of sexual abuse
- Many victims of CSA are waiting months or years before accessing support.

On the role of schools in preventing CSA:

- Schools are frequently not fulfilling their role in giving children the knowledge to recognise abuse and seek help where necessary, making the early identifications of victims harder
- A significant number of schools are failing to offer pupils lessons on CSA
- Teachers feel confident identifying the signs and symptoms of CSA, but concerns raised with LAs are much more likely to be acted upon if the child has made a clear disclosure.

On children's experiences of the justice system:

- Increased reports of sexual offences are placing a significant demand on police, the CPS, LA children's services departments, the criminal and family courts, and specialist voluntary sector services for victims and survivors
- CSA investigations take considerably longer than for any other type of offence, including adult sexual offences, with the median length of time for investigations of CSA cases is 248 days compared to a median 147 days for non-CSA offences
- Many victims receive inconsistent advice about their entitlement to therapeutic support prior to court and many are blocked from receiving any therapeutic input
- Children taking part in video recorded interviews after reporting abuse and subsequent court cases overwhelmingly find the experience difficult and often distressing
- Victims of CSA are facing long waits to find out whether perpetrators have been charged.

Statutory guidance - Slavery and Trafficking Prevention and Risk Orders (30/04/17)

Guidance and forms for practitioners about Slavery and Trafficking Prevention Orders and Slavery and Trafficking Risk Orders.

Part 2 of the Modern Slavery Act 2015 introduces 2 new civil orders designed to prevent the harm caused by slavery and human trafficking offences: Slavery and Trafficking Prevention Orders (STPOs) and Slavery and Trafficking Risk Orders (STROs).

The police, the NCA, immigration officers and labour abuse prevention officers from the Gangmasters and Labour Abuse Authority can apply to court for these orders, which allow the courts to place a range of restrictions on the behaviour and activities of a person who poses a risk of committing slavery or trafficking offences.

The HO has published this statutory guidance, issued under section 33 of the Modern Slavery Act 2015, as a practical tool intended to help those responsible for applying for STPOs and STROs carry out their responsibilities effectively and appropriately.

New crackdown on child groomers comes into force (03/04/17)

Groomers who target children through mobile phones and social media now face 2 years in prison, after a new government law came into force today.

The Justice Secretary Elizabeth Truss has acted to bring in a new offence of sexual communication with a child to cover a gap in existing legislation and ensure children are protected. Those found guilty also face being automatically placed on the sex offenders register.

The new offence will allow authorities, including the police and CPS, to intervene earlier and stamp out abhorrent grooming before sexual activity can occur.

Greater protection for rape victims and children at risk of grooming (19/03/17)

- Victims of sex crimes will soon be able to have their cross-examination pre-recorded before trial
- Rollout of the scheme to be fast-tracked and will now begin in September
- New offence of sexual communication with a child will also be introduced
- Groomers face up to two years in prison and will be automatically placed on the sex offenders register

New measures that will spare rape victims the trauma and inconvenience of attending court hearings will be rolled out across the country from September.

Victims of rape and other sex crimes will have their cross-examination evidence pre-recorded and played during the trial.

Originally the rollout was not due to begin until next year but will now start in September after Justice Secretary Elizabeth Truss and senior judges agreed to accelerate the scheme.

Accidents are biggest killer of children, charity warns as it launches Family Safety Week

(28/04/17)

Families are being encouraged to come together to help prevent unnecessary accidents to babies, toddlers and children under five, as RoSPA launches Family Safety Week 2017.

Accidents are the biggest killer of children and young people aged 0-19 in the UK, with at least one child under the age of five killed by an accident every week.

During Family Safety Week, which runs from May 2-5, the safety charity will be highlighting the fact these accidents don't have to happen by providing tips, advice, support and resources to help keep under-fives safe at home and on the move.

1st Joint Report of the Education and Health Committees of Session 2016-17 - Children and young people's mental health—the role of education (02/05/17)

This inquiry follows two recent reports on children and young people's mental health by the Health and Education Committees. Last year the Education Committee reported on the Mental health and well-being of looked-after children and in 2014, the then Health Committee published a report on Children's and adolescents' mental health and CAMHS.

Late in 2016 we decided to hold a joint inquiry to look at the area more comprehensively.

Online Safety remains a key priority as internet use rises (28/03/17)

95% of children in Wales aged 7 to 15 used the internet at home, a new report published today show.

The Education Secretary Kirsty Williams has announced that online safety will remain a key priority for the Welsh Government with an extensive programme to enhance online safety practice in schools over the next two years, to continue to support young people to stay safe online.

The figures from the National Survey of Wales show:

- 95% of children aged 7 to 15 used the internet at home.
- The device most commonly used by these children was a tablet or similar (71%).
- 64% of children aged 7 to 15, who access the internet outside school, accessed a school learning platform and 67% used the internet to find other information related to schoolwork.
- 87% of parents felt that their child knew how to stay safe when using the internet.
- 56% of households with children aged 7-15 used parental control filters.
- Further analysis showed that the parents are more likely to use a parental control filter if they are more highly educated, if they also use the internet themselves, if they have more children, and if their children are younger.

Series of inspections to focus on children living with neglect (18/04/17)

The six joint targeted area inspections will involve Ofsted, Care Quality Commission, HMI Constabulary and HMI Probation.

A new set of inspections will examine how local partner agencies - including LAs, health and probation services and the police - are working together to protect children living with, or at risk of, neglect.

The series of 6 joint targeted area inspections (JTAI) involving Ofsted, CQC, HMI Constabulary and HMI Probation will begin in May this year.

JTAI assess how effectively agencies are working together in their local area to help and protect children. Each set of joint inspections also evaluates the multi-agency response to a particular issue or theme.

Following feedback from key stakeholders, the 4 inspectorates decided that the latest series of JTAI should look at local support services for children living with neglect. In particular, the inspections will focus on the experiences of children aged between 7 and 15 years old, who may be at higher risk of going missing or being exploited, or who exhibit challenging behaviours in adolescence.

Consultations

Open consultation - National fostering stocktake: call for evidence (21/04/17)

Sir Martin Narey and Mark Owers have been appointed to conduct a National fostering stocktake. As a first step, they are seeking views on the current state of foster care in England and how the prospects of children in care might be improved through changes to fostering.

We'd like to hear from the following about how to make fostering more effective:

- practitioners
- academics
- foster carers
- children in care
- children and adults who have left care

We're looking at:

- the types of fostering offered by providers
- the status, role and function of foster carers in relation to other professionals
- how we commission, regulate and inspect fostering settings
- what works best in fostering to improve outcomes for children and young people
- how we can improve the experiences of young people entering foster care, transitioning between placements, and leaving foster care

Closing date: 16th June 2017

Analysing family circumstances and education (12/04/17)

We're seeking views on the methodology in our paper analysing the household income and educational outcomes of pupils in England.

The statistical paper describes a provisional methodology we used to calculate equivalised household income bands. We have done this by matching administrative income data from other government departments to anonymised pupil records.

It includes analysis on:

- educational outcomes at key stage 2 (age 11) and key stage 4 (age 16)
- characteristics of schools attended
- family characteristics and size
- effect of housing costs
- geographical distribution of households

The paper also outlines an approach to looking at ordinary working families.

National standards and outcomes framework for children and young people (31/03/17)

The Welsh Government are consulting on the National standards and outcomes framework for children and young people which will:

- identify the outcomes children and young people can expect in relation to children and young people's advocacy
- ensure that advocacy service providers and those commissioning them can be sure those standards are being achieved
- enable LAs to evidence the support children and young people will receive
- provide children with care and support needs with information about what they are entitled to.

Children in care - raising standards, improving support for care leavers and the future for adoption

13th June 2017 London £210 + VAT
This seminar will present an opportunity to consider steps to improve children's residential care, following the government response to Sir Martin Narey's Review of Children's Residential Care.

Attendees will also discuss the implementation of Ofsted's social care common inspection framework from April 2017 and what more can be done to improve the mental health and wellbeing of looked after children.

Those in attendance will also assess the implications of the regionalisation of England's adoption system, outlined in Adoption: A Vision for Change, and recently introduced measures to promote adoption by recognising the rights of prospective adopters in court proceedings.

We also expect discussion on the findings of the Education Select Committee's inquiry into the future of fostering.
